Passage for Section A: "The Lost Bracelet"

Juma was walking home from school when he noticed a shiny bracelet lying on the footpath. It looked expensive and delicate. He picked it up and saw that it had a small note: "Please return to the owner. Reward offered." Juma thought about keeping it. The bracelet could buy him the football boots he had wanted for months. However, he also knew it belonged to someone who would be very sad if it was lost.

Juma decided to ask around the neighborhood. He visited several houses but nobody claimed the bracelet. As he was about to head home, he saw a lady searching frantically on the street. He ran to her and showed her the bracelet. Tears of joy filled her eyes. She thanked Juma and offered him a reward, but he politely refused. He felt proud that he had done the right thing.
