Poem for Section A (read aloud or provide as text/audio):

"The Forest's Call"

In the heart of Kenya, the forest stands tall,
Whispering secrets, hearing nature's call.
Birds chirp loudly, and monkeys swing free,
The rivers flow gently, as happy as can be.
But humans are careless, cutting trees away,
For timber and firewood, they do not delay.
The animals flee, the soil turns bare,
The once green forest cries in despair.
Yet hope is not lost, if we act today,
Plant trees, save rivers, let the forests stay.
Together as one, we can make it right,
Protecting our forests, for a future bright.
