iv. Strengthened unity – Muslims felt Allah was responding to their struggles.
v. Built strong faith – Gradual exposure helped them remain firm in their belief.
vi. Preservation of the Qur'an – Immediate memorization prevented distortion.

4. The Family and Ethical Dilemmas

a) Ways Qur'an serves as a guide in daily life (more than four):
i. Moral guidance – Instructs Muslims to avoid lies, theft, and corruption. Example: Kenyan Muslim leaders are reminded not to engage in bribery.
ii. Spiritual guidance – Encourages regular prayer, fasting, and remembrance of Allah.
iii. Social justice – Protects the rights of orphans, widows, and the poor. Example: Muslims in Kisumu donate food during droughts guided by Qur'an.
iv. Legal guidance – Provides laws on crime, inheritance, and contracts.
v. Economic guidance – Prohibits gambling and exploitation in trade.
vi. Environmental guidance – Encourages care for nature. Example: Muslims in Kilifi plant trees to fight deforestation as stewards of Allah's creation.

b) Reasons why Muslims must value the Qur'an as divine guidance (more than three):
i. It is the final and complete revelation from Allah.
ii. It confirms and corrects earlier scriptures.
iii. It provides timeless solutions for human problems.
iv. It prepares Muslims for eternal life in the hereafter.
v. It strengthens faith and spiritual connection with Allah.
vi. It acts as a moral compass for individuals and communities.
