As much as we talk about it, each of us deals with grief at some point during our lifetimes. This experience of intense sorrow is neither comfortable nor pleasant, but it is something we must face head on. Not only does grief torment us as individuals, but it can also affect the way we relate to others; after all, it's not easy to talk about feelings of intense sadness. But when we ignore our feelings of grief, then we are likely to feel even worse. So, as much as we like to avoid awkward conversations, it is worthwhile to try and share our feelings with others.
