It was Nasieku's wedding day. The reception was held at her parents' big, rectangular, new house. Women carried large, square baskets full of traditional food. The food had been cooked in big, round, new pots. The traditional homemade porridge was carried in huge, oval tins. The young men had already put up very large, square, new tents for the party.

Soon, the bridegroom and his relatives arrived, carrying cereals in huge, oval bags. The bridegroom was guided to sit on a wide, round stool. It had been made specially for him.
