On Tuesday morning, Mr. Ondimu heard loud screams from Mama Wario's house. He quickly put on his clothes and ran out of his shanty towards the area of the screams. He ran as fast as a deer as he had no shoes. On his arrival to Mama Wario's home, he got covered by a thick black smoke. This smoke was coming from Mama Wario's house. Villagers of Tondono, police and the fire brigade were all there. Mama Wario was still screaming and shouting, "Wariooo! Hassan! Are you still there!". Some villagers held onto her to restrain her from getting into the house.

As all this was going on, the fire brigade and some villagers were busy trying to put out the fire that was causing the smoke. The fire brigade used their hose pipes to extinguish the fire. The villagers did not hesitate to use buckets of sand and water to put out the fire. The efforts were seen to be bearing fruit as the fire started ceasing. As all this was happening Mr. Ondimu just stood shocked watching the tragic event in disbelief. He had not uttered any word in the five minutes he had been in Mama Wario's compound. "Mzee Katumo, what caused this fire breakout?" asked Mr. Ondimu.

Mr. Katumo replied, 'I really don't know, let's ask the police to tell us more about the cause of this incident'. As they were approaching one police officer, the fire brigade was seen carrying Wario and Hassan out of the house. They were unconscious and were therefore rushed to hospital.

Mr. Ondimu and Mr. Katumo approached the officer and it was confirmed to them that the fire had been caused by leaking paraffin from a stove that had been lit to prepare tea. The police officer also told them that Mama Wario had gone to buy bread when the fire broke out. She had left Wario and Hassan asleep.
